The charter conferred by the bill is limited in duration, expiring in 1862, the object be-ing, as set forth in the preamble, to make temporary provision for the civil government of the territory until permanent settlements shall be established and the number of coloaists increased. Sir Allan McNab, so well known in connection with Canadian politics, is named as the person most likely to be the overnor of the new Colony.

We are glad to see that the reforms con emplated by the Derby Ministry in the gov-ernment of the Hudson's Bay Territories do not stop here. In glancing over the news by the Ningara's mails, we notice that a deputa-tion consisting of representatives of several influential public bedies, with several influential members of Parliament, waited on Lord Derby on the 6th fast, to advocate the total abolition of the Hadson's Bay Company's monopoly—meaning, we suppose, a refusal to renew its charter on its expiration in 1859, or so to modify it as to confine the Company to the narrow sphere of a mere trading corporation. Lord Derby listened at-tentively. He did not commit himself it the adoption of any specific measures localing to the end almed at by the deputation but he gave them good reason for hope b declaring that he "would value the interests "of a far monopoly." And not only this : he further assured the deputation that he was prepared to apply the same policy to the val-leys of the Saskatchewan and the Red River of the North that was about to be inaugurat-gents were united, well organized and daring— sithough always beaten in the open field, they continued a most desperate guerilla war. Sir Colin Campbell had 48,000 men under his command, of which an average of ten per cent. were sick or wounded. He would soon want thirty thousand fresh troops. The old General bore he brunt of the march and weather, and fought well, but had some very narrow escapes from death in battle. A London correspondent of the Boston Truveller, who is or professes to be an Englishman, gives a very gloomy account of conduct of British troops in that country. He says:

India still continues disturbed, and, between drinking, fever, and cholers, our army melts away. Our bravest have fallen and still one hundred victories have guined us no sure foothold-over the alien race. The Sepoy enemy nowhere presents a firm front, but harasses us by a guerilla warfare, and by an obatinate resistance in straggling fortresses. Our own conduct is not defensable. The permitted conduct of our army would stamp us with eternal diagrace if we were dealing with any civilized power. Our British troops give no quatter-every action is dred and thousands—the routs of our army is indicated by blackened corpses, the prey of the hideous vulture and the jackal, and ruined villages soaked in blood. Our alles, the savaye (shoorkes and Sikha, are totally anrestraiped—they apare neither age nor sex, and wielding saked, awords, the rush upon the plunder with cient pulsees, and hold their hideous organs in her sacred temples. PROM SOUTHERN KANSAS.

Montgomery and the Late Tron

sip of late, I propose to give a brief atetch of his "interior life," relative to the charges made against him.

James Montgomery is a native of Kentucky, about 45 years of aga. He came to Kanasa is the fall of 1854, and in the spring of 1855 was followed by his wife and seven children. They have now a younger child, making eight. He enjoyed rather poor health when young, and his father for this reason sent him to school, as he are not extense account to work. At length his was not strong enough to work. At length his health failed at school, and he was taken out and allowed to ramble, and engage in wild sports for amusement or recreation. He spant the greater part of his time for awhile as speat the greater part of his time for awhite as trapper, living out in a tent or aleeping in the open field; and during this time he became a most skillful marksman with that "national institution," a Kestucky rifa. With such exercise, his constitution was soon braced up, and doubtless his present skill and well preportioned. sinly attributable to this way, xposure. He is tall and well proportioned; as a penetrating countenance; his voice is soft and musical; he speaks fluently, either in public and musical; he speaks fluently, either in public in private conversation; his manners are in private conversation; his manners are and musical; he speaks fluently, either in public ir in private conversation; his manners are misable and pleasant, and his organization throughout is of the fluer mold. While his ex-trior might seem to indicate effeminacy, he is in ality the Cassins of Kansas, and possesse more rve and cool decision than one man in a thou-

Best, and most fitting of all, is his moral character. He is a Christian, and practises in his private walks all he ever professes. He has a native abhortence for everything gross or unmaily, and never suffers himself to be tempted beyond his ecose of personal obligation or duty. The conaciousness that he has only attempted to largith may be taken to be stringy of material, if we are to succeed. The ingenious writers who enlighten the public on the wonders of the deep, tell us that currents carry the cable miles out of the ship's course before it touches the bottom; that, ever so freely payed out, the cable probably hange in festooms from one such marine mountain top to another; and that, even if the cable is so fortunate as to excape the shape edge of a precipice, mere suspension between two distant points may strict in the yound its strength. If this be so, the more cable we have, within reason, the better. No ship affoat but the Leighthan could afford, even in the midst of the process, to make any delays that might be thought advisable. Whatever may be thought of the word four ships sufficed to lay down one cable,—all is wis gower must that person be, then, who feel sure that nobody expects much from a fleet, which we have swell and the way very little better of himself, until the ladges of the county, in their magnasimity, make any delays that might be thought advisable. Whatever may be thought of which we feel sure that nobody expects much from a fleet four ships sufficed by overtasked, and, all of them reckoning upon good weather and other favor able circumstances. There is a unity and simplicity about the undertaking which ill accords while so complex and hazardons a processe.

The War in India—A Gloomy Prospect.

Late letters received in England from India, dated at Dombay and in the .eamp of Sir Colm Campbell in May and June, show that the Sey poy rebellion is far from being anddued. The British troops suffered to a very fatal extent from the heat of the weather, whilst the insurgents were united, well organized and dariag—sithough always beaten in the open field, they continued a most deeperate guerilla war. Sir it was owned by men who had been active for the strength of the producing causes or incentives to active from the heat of the weather, whilst the insuragents were united, well organized and dariag—sithough always be his men to ride pro-stavery men's norses, when in the field, but to take no property of any description until it was ascertained positively that it was owned by men who had been active in driving away free state men. The most ever taken from one man was $25.50, and the aggregate of all they have taken through the winter and spring is about $60. Mr. Montgomery was treasurer of the company, and paid out all the money himself. Not a cent was ever distributed among the company, and when they disbanded last month, he had just five cents of the company's fands on hand. Not the first article was ever taken from women or children, and in no case was a woman ever treated with the least disrespect by any of his party. Captain Montgomery atands before the world in this respect, without a taint or mortal blemish.

As a military man, he has tew, if any, equals in Kannas, and all who have served under him state that they believe he is the best fitted for a military leader of any man they ever met. Should such a catastrophe as a general war ever befal us, undootledy James Montgomery would be at the head of the military board. I can say

Should such a catastrophe as a general warever befal us, undoubtedly James Monigomery would be at the head of the military board. I can say this, without inflicting any discredit upon other men. are now wilted and red with rust. A fine field of wheat near here, where a few days since there was a promise of a yield of thirty bushels per sera, the owner is now moving down green to sare for fodder. Misortunes come not singly. Hard times and a short grain crop will try the power of lows to resist evils.

The crop of small grains is not so important to low as to many others of the Western States. Our corn trop ranks in importance, perhaps, greater than all three I have mentioned. Pork, with stock and fruit raising, is really wheren low as the present excels, while in the misorione attending the present grain crop, she has the unfortunate lack to be secompanied by many of her fortunate lack to be secompanied by many of her sister States. And it is the transformation of grain and grass into pork, cattle, horses and sheep, only, that the farmers of Central Iowa can make money. Without railroads the transfer of grain to the rivers absorbs the entire prolits of the crop.

Oors tooks well and will doubtless be a good crop, while she grass crop will be immense, and the prehands of the State, what few there are,

The reverend gentleman also stated that if he failed in getting funds for his new inhernacle, it was probable that he would leave this country for America pranstrain."

The Literary Cobinet says:—*To all present appearances our future monarch's choice of a wife is positively limited to exactly seven ladies of royal blood—unless, indeed, he selects a consort much older than himself. This will, doubtless, appear startling to some of our readers, but it is nevertheless true."

A friend at the South, in a late letter, makes e following amusing reference to a well-known istom in the "Old North" and some other States:

"I am getting to be quite a gallant in my old age. After all my wanderings, I may yet ind my 'better half?—the Mrs. — of my dreamness the old homestead. There is one slight objection, however, to almost the girls in this country—they all take must if—don't sauff it up the mose in the ordinary way, and eujoy the luxury of a good sheeze, but show the end of a slick so smeking and—O, ye gods!—chering, in tried women! The soldiers were soon overpowered by the larger numbers of the peasants, and left altogether fitteen men, four ofheers among them, killed; while of the peasantry about forty my have been killed. The chief seat of the insurrectionary movement seems to be very-near Revai itself; but even at Dorpat, which is situated in the nortwestern part of Livonis, and which is likewise peopled by the Esthonian race, symptoms of an approaching outbreak have been observed.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

Mr. Morphy, who arrived out by the Africa, quietly walked into the St. George's Chees Clinbone night last week, and, after beating Mr. Lewen, who is a recognized champion, with the greatest case, offered a challenge to Mr. Stanton, the British Cowe de Lion of the noble game. Mr. Stanton accepted the proposition, sat down, went to work, almost cleared the board in some twenty moves, and was about withdrawing in contempt, when he was arrested by s'cheek," when in three moves more grew into a "mate." You may imagine the consternation of the here and the lookers on. "May I ask your name, Sir?" said Mr. S. "Certainly, Sir, replied his young antagonist. "My name is Morphy." "Oh! of America?" "Yea, Sir," "Al !then! am sorr, but! am not gate in play just now. I should rather not risk another game just at present." And so Mr. Staunton withdraw. The event has excited quite as great sensation in the world of chess as was bred in the world of yeahstenen by the victory of the America; an ilm. Morphy has made a match with Anderece, the Hungarian, upon which all England that playeth chess will, of course, be vehemeally betting in the course a fortnight. Aver this season.—Bid.

—Yesterday evening three families from Mitchell county, in the north of lows, arrived in town, and after making purchases of their fall and winter supplies of groceries and fabrics, they left for Linn sounty in Southern Kansas.

They report that there are hundreds of wagons from lows now on the road, and that all of them are making their way to the valleys of South Kansas.—Bid. GRINDSTONES. —The Kansas Oity Express Company are daily bringing in orders to our merchants from all the principal towns of the Territory, from Lawrence, Topeks, Lecompton, Tecumseh, Ossa-watomie, Minneola, Council Grove and Fort Scott. It is estimated that these orders amount weekly to some four thousand dollars. LAKE HURON GRINDSTONES

The time for tall is pass, and night has come, The last and sadder-of the harvest-eves; Worn out with labor long and wear-isone, Dr. oplog and faint, the respers hasten home Each laden, with his sheaves. Last of the laborers, thy feet I galo, Lord of the barvest fand my spirit grieves That I am burdened not so much with grain As with a-heavness of he or and brain;— Master, behold my sheaves ! Pew, light and worthless,—yet their britting weight Through all an Irame a weary aching leaves; Por long I st ugcled with my hapless sale, And said and toiled till it was dark and late,— Yet these are all my sheaves.

Full well I know I have more tares than wheat.— Brambies and finwers, dry stalts and withered le Wherefore I blush and weep, as at tay feet I kneel door neverently and repeat, "Master, behold my sheaves!" I keew these blossems clustering heavily with evening dew upon their folded leaves, Can claim no value nor utility.— Therefore shall fragiancy and beauty be The glory of my sheaves. So do I gather strength and hope anew:

For well I know thy paleot one perceives
Not what I did, but what I strave to do,—
And though the ful, ripe ears be sadly lew,
Thou will accept my sheaves.

SALT LAKE VALLEY AND CITY. HIGHLY PICTURESOUE DESCRIPTIONS The correspondents of the New York po pers describe in glowing terms the appear ce of Sali Lake Valley and the city of the Saints, as they appeared on the entrance of the Peace Commissioners. I have ceased to ridicule the extravagant rhetoric of the Mormons about the "Valley of the Mountains," or to wonder that a people so fanatical by nature should have found in the seenery which surrounds them inspiration for the "war." I have traversed the Tyrol, wandered through Switzerland, tramped with a party of German students over the hills of a Palitinate, have crossed the Alleghanies half a dozen times, and have waded in the trout-brooks of Northern New Hampshire so many summers that I am familiar with every landscape between Lakes Umbagog and Connecticut, but I have never seen a panorama of mountain scenery so varied and beautiful as on our ride from Bear River to the Valley of the Great Lake. For miles and miles in the kanyons the road windsthrough thickets of willows and alders and howthorn bushes, whose twigs interlaced, and often hung so low under the load of leaves and blossoms that even when we bent bown on the necks of our little Indian ponies, they swept our backs. Through the interstices of the foliage we could catch glimpses of the mountain sides, streaked by slides of gravel, and studded with masses of sandstone surrounded by twittering flocks of birds which had built their nests in the crevices of the rock. The ridges we crossed between kanyon and kanyon were covered with fields of luxuriant grass and flowers. From them, whenever the sun shone clear, we could see on the west and south the broken line of the Wahsatch range; but through the morning haze only the outline of its white crests was visible, and our eyes were strained to discern more.

We turn our eyes from the Salt Lake back to the city, which is just peeping from under the hill. We are stopped by a mud wall twelve feet high, six feet wide at the base, iwelve feet high, six feet wide at the base, two and a hal feet on top; in front is a wide, deep ditch, and, it is detended by seven bastous at halt masket range. These are pierced with loopholes to afford a front and flank free in case of an attack. It, was pretendedly built to keep out the Indians, but as it encompasses the city, which covers an area of six square miles, all its male population could not thoroughly defend it. The hills rise abruntly around it and there is an abundance. For the first night we comped at sunseal about half way through Echo Kunyon, which is twenty miles long. We started the next morning at dawn, and just about sunrise caught a glimpse of the Mormon fortifications, none of which were visible during our first day's ride. As the kanyon approaches Weber River, it dwindles in width to five or it handled test. The northern side becomes not thoroughly defend it. The hills rise ab-ruptly around it, and there is an abundance of eminences where a riffeman could kill per-sons in the city, and the wall be but as a wall of paper beneath him. It was built in 1854; its design was to give the people something to do, as to keep the mind and bands occupied a perfect wall of rock, which rises perpendicularly hundreds of feet above the road. The is the best means to prevent impertinent in-quiry and leave no time for rebellion. The wall above described does not extend more than half around the city. 'tween the road and the bluffs. The first in dication that we were approaching the forti-fications was the sight of piles of rock heaped into walls pieced with loopholes, which were visible on every projecting point of the cliffs into waits pieged with loopholes, which were visible on every projecting point of the cliffs olong the northern side, from most of which a pebble could be snapped down upon the road. Shortly after, on turning a bend in the kanyon, we saw that all the willows along the creek had been cut away, and through the clear space a ditch about five feet wide and ten feet deep was dug across the whole bottom, which the road crossed on a corduroy bridge. The dirt thrown from this ditch was packed so as to form a dam on which logs were so placed that it would answer also for a breastwork, behind which rifemen could be posted under cover. A sluiceway at one end allowed a free flow to the creek, but this could easily be filled up, and the material for that purpose was lying near at hand: About 20.9 yards further on another breastwork and ditch had been constructed from the creek to a rock gacar the! base of the northern cliff. Space smileient for the passage of wagons was left between the rock and the foot of the cliff, and the evident intention was to compet trains to pass beneath the precipices which had DESCRIPTION OF THE CITY. Imagine a perfectly level plain, apparently twenty miles wide and one hundred miles long, almost surrounded by mountains. Near to the mountains, on the east of the plain, conceive a section of land, six miles square, mach wider than Broodway, regularly laid out and running exactly at right angles to each other, either due north and south or due at and west; they are 130 feet wider—the either was a street of the city as year they are they are under the city are represented that they are a street of the city as a street of the city and they are a street of the city are a street in the street in the street in a street of the street in the street in the street is a fresh street of the street in the street in the street is a fresh street of the street in the street in the street is a fresh street of the street in the street in the street is a fresh street of the street in the street in the street is a fresh street of the street in the street in the street is a fresh street of the street in the Space sufficient for the passage of wagons was left between the rock and the foot of the cliff, and the evident intention was to compel trains to pass beneath the precipices which had probably been mined.

At the distance of 50 or 60 yards was another dam and a ditch which the road crossed again on a temporary bridge. The purpose of this ditch was to prevent wagons frem passing to the opposite side of the bottom and avoiding the vicinity of the cliff. A hundred yards further on was the last dam and its accompanying breastwork. They stretched the whole way across the bottom. By the aid of this dam the kanyon could be overflowed for several hundred yards to the depth of five or six feet. It was constructed just above the mouths of two narrow gorges which enter the kanyon as this point, nearly opposite one another. The earth washed down out of the gorge on the southern side forms a tongue of sand which extends nearly half way into Echo Kanyon and obviates the necessity of so long a dam as the first one of the series. A gully washed by the rain down the centre of this tongue was dug over and arranged so as to form a breastwork in connection with the dam. Stone walls were built across the mouth of each of the narrow gorges. On the slope of the steep bills adjoining the gorge on the southern side of the kanyon, ditches were dug and embankments made infront of them at different heights. These command the whole of the fortifications below. But a fanking party, by taking possession of the summit of any of the southern hills, would command this entire series of works.

For nearly a mile below these gorges a chain

It passes over a series of ridges down into the East Kanyon, through which flows Bashman's Fork. Here we were struck by a heavy thunder storm, and forced to camp. The rain pattered on us all mght long, and lasted through the next iorenoon. We climbed the Big Mountains into the cloud, and lost, of course, the famous view from its summit. The clouds lifted as we descended into Emigration Kanyon. All down the side of the mountain the road was lined with rose bushes in fall bloom, clusters of columbines and particeolored turks of wild flowers, drooping under the weight of rain drops, and just visble throug the mist.

It was not until we emerged from Emigration Kanyon that we obtained our first view of the city. The sky was clear overhead, and the sun was burning away the clouds from the summits of the West Mountains. They still hung low down on the peaks which bound the valley on the south-east, almost covering the snow upon the crests of the range. The line of the Great Salt Lake was glittering along the western horizon. The transition was so sudden that the whole party nittered a shout of delight. We spurred our ponies down the long slope, those of the company who had lived in the city pointing out the prominent buildings as we galloped along—the timed of the Great Salt Lake was glittering along the western horizon. NOWERN-AND CLANEAR IN ORAIS WARRHOUSE.

It will be recollected by many of our readers that when the Board of Trade of this city adopted the new system of Whest Inspection, the introduction of blowers and cleaners into the grain warehouses was strongly urged by several old and experienced grain desiers, as being the best and surest method of improving the character of Officing opening wheat. A committee was at that time also appointed to investigate the matter, and report thereon to a subsequent meeting of the Board. What that committee has done we are unable to newly invented blower and cleaner, which has out been fitted up in that house. It consists of a large faming wheel, which makes 1,300 revo-lations per minute, shrowing a most powerful successive the property of the property of the and thirty-six inches in diameter, extending from the first floor of the warehouse, clear up to the roof. This funnel is grated from top to bot-tom by rows of iron bars, placed twelve inches apart, each one covering the other. At the top of this funnel the grain is received from the elevators and while it is running therough it has can furnist the grain is received from the stors, and while it is remaining through it has ome in contact with each of the rows o bars ce is reaches she bottom, and thus under-rathorough cleansing, while the strong cur-of air passing upwards, blows the dust, and other substances clear out of the fun-ching completely separating all extraneous dirt and other substances clear out of the fun-nel—thus completely separating all extraneous metter from the grain, and leaving it to pass down the funnel cool and clean into a bin at the bottom. An experiment was made with a lot of hot spring wheat. Before it went into the fun-nel it was dirty, damp and hot; but after pass-ing through the tunnel, it appeared cool; dry and remarkably clean—so much so, that sev-eral good judges pronounced it equal to No. I wheat. The improvement was apparent to all; and no one who did not know the fact, could have supposed the wheat which came out as the Toere is a good prospect for us in this section to lose the most of our wheat. It has been rainy for a week and very warm. Already there has been a large smount of the wheat lost, and if we don't get sunshine in a very few days there will be a failure here.

Yours respectfully.

THE WHEAT CROP IS THE UNITED STATES.

From the N. T. Tribune, 20th.

We cannot publish all the "opinious of the press," nor all our correspondents in their speculations upon the wheat crop of the present season, and if see did, we should confuse our readers beyond their shillity of comprehension of the real truth. We will therefore som up our opinion, based upon the best evidence that we can obtain from extensive information, and give that to our readers for what it may be worth.

Laid over and ordered published.

A Card—Post Oyrica—Mears. Editors:—A letter, over the signature of "Ichabod," is published in to-day's issue of the Toma, bearing date of the 19th inst., and purporting to have been written in Washington Gity, which, in every particular with which my name is connected, is aboutedly false. The letter in question I believe was written in this city, the design of which is apparent to any reliecting mind. "Ichabod" is too shallow to impose on any inclinent reader of the Tomas. The clerks engaged in this office I personally respect; many of them whose names are mentio sed, have been my friends for years.

This is the first attack ever made upon me through the cohumns of a public Journal, and I trust that it will be the last. And as I conceive that my integrity and honor as an officer of the Department are assailed, I now distinctly aver that the statements referring to myself, and to Mr. Cook, as postmaster, made by "Chabod" are a tissue of misrepresentations, of which an honest man could not be guilty, whether to accomplish a partizan end or not. "Ichabod" letter is a fit culmination of the miserable efforts made to create discension in this office in order to destroy the harmony existing inall its departments.
